

TABLES II., III., IV. & V.

TABLES II, III, IV. & V. GOLD COIN taken from and returned to the BANK OF ENGLAND, for and from the Circulation of the UNITED KINGDOM.

THESE Tables exhibit the monthly movements of GOLD COIN in ENGLAND, IRELAND, and SCOTLAND, separately, and in the UNITED KINGDOM in the aggregate: first, the actual amounts taken from or returned to the BANK OF ENGLAND in each month; and, then, the amount taken or returned on balance; the latter part of the Table presenting the most striking result.

It would appear that the GOLD COIN used for the Internal Circulation is subject to the action of a tide as regular and as independent of the state of the Exchanges and of the rate of Interest as that which has been shown to govern the circulation of BANK NOTES; but which ebbs and flows at certain seasons, instead of in every month.

Thus, as regards ENGLAND, of late years there would appear to have been an invariable flow of GOLD COIN from the BANK during the months of April, July, August, September, October and December. On the other hand, during the months of January, February, June and November, the current is almost invariably in the opposite direction, and there is a tendency to a similar, but less regular, flow during March and May. It may be remarked that during the earlier portion of the period embraced in these Tables, notably from 1865 to 1874, the action which took place during the months of January, March and May, was almost the reverse of that which now occurs; while the efflux during December, to which there was formerly only a tendency, has latterly become quite pronounced.

IRELAND takes Coin during September and October—rarely during November—and returns it during the rest of the year; and SCOTLAND, where the demand for Coin is always coincident with the recurrence of the half-yearly terms of Whitsuntide (May 15th) and Martinmas (November 11th), invariably takes Coin during May, October and November, and less regularly during September, and returns it during the rest of the year—more especially in the months of January, June and December.

During 1885, owing to a run on the Bank of Ireland, consequent upon the failure of the Munster Bank, IRELAND took the exceptional amount of £2,240,000 against only £805,000 returned, and it does not appear that the balance of nearly £1,500,000 has since been restored to the BANK. This may, however, be partly accounted for by the fact that during the two previous years, 1883 and 1884, the amounts returned in excess of those taken were considerably larger than usual.

In Table V., showing the movements of Coin in the UNITED KINGDOM, the course of the tide is much more distinctly marked. There is invariably an outflow from the BANK during April and May, and from July to October; and a return from January to March, in June and December, and generally in November. It might almost be said that Coin is taken from the BANK during Spring and Autumn, and returned during Summer and Winter.

It would appear that ENGLAND and SCOTLAND take more Coin from the BANK than they return; while, on the other hand, IRELAND returns more than she takes: but, in the aggregate, there is apparently a large annual addition to the Gold circulation of the UNITED KINGDOM.

Thus, during the 24 years, 1865-1888,

ENGLAND took on balance	£47,928 ^m
IRELAND returned on balance		£14,096
SCOTLAND took on balance	1,734
Apparent addition to the Gold Circulation of the UNITED KINGDOM		35,566
	£49,662^m	£49,662^m

It must, however, be borne in mind that, during the same period, light Coin to the extent of £24,016,000 was withdrawn from circulation; that a considerable amount of Gold Coin is annually melted for the purposes of trade and the arts; and that there is, undoubtedly, a large aggregate of small exports which do not appear in the Custom House or any other returns.
