Please note this list is not updated on a continuous basis. It is also possible that separate firms (with different Firm Reference Numbers) are part of a group of companies that use similar brand names (i.e, a simplified common version of the firms' legal names). If you have multiple deposits across a group of firms using similar brand names, you should check with the firms whether the £85k deposit protection limit is shared.

Note: Not all banking and savings brands protected by the FSCS are included in this table – only those which share FSCS depositor protection coverage with other brands. If your banking and saving brand does not appear in this table, you can ask them directly how your money is protected or check the Financial Services Register (<https://register.fca.org.uk/>). Banks whose deposits are FSCS protected are also required to display FSCS posters at branches listing the brands that share protection, provide depositors with an annual information sheet describing protection, and include a statement regarding protection on depositor statements of account.

Please note that the information noted above relates to the authorised institutions in the relevant sector as at the date noted and is not updated on a continuous basis. For up to date information about authorised firms and their associated brand names please refer to the Financial Services Register (<https://register.fca.org.uk/>). Search the register for a firm name, select the relevant firm from results, scroll down, then expand the 'Trading names' section for a full list of registered and trading names.

Many banks, including large banks, use deposit aggregators to source retail deposits. Deposit aggregators, sometimes also referred to as cash management platforms or savings marketplaces, are online platforms which enable customers to deposit funds in savings accounts held with a number of banks or building societies. If you are not sure which banks actually hold your deposits please contact the deposit aggregator to confirm the position. If you hold deposits directly with a bank as well as indirectly in the same bank through an intermediary like a deposit aggregator, the £85k deposit protection limit is shared.

Deposit aggregators, sometimes also referred to as cash management platforms or savings marketplaces, are online platforms which enable customers to deposit funds in savings accounts held with a number of banks or building societies. If you are not sure which banks actually hold your deposits please contact the deposit aggregator to confirm the position. If you hold deposits directly with a bank as well as indirectly in the same bank through an intermediary like a deposit aggregator, the £85k deposit protection limit is shared.

LIST OF BANKING AND SAVINGS BRANDS PROTECTED BY THE SAME FSCS COVERAGE COMPILED BY THE BANK OF ENGLAND AS AT 1 October 2024

Please note this list is not updated on a continuous basis. It is also possible that separate firms (with different Firm Reference Numbers) are part of a group of companies that use similar brand names (i.e, a simplified common version of the firms' legal names). If you have multiple deposits across a group of firms using similar brand names, you should check with the firms whether the £85k deposit protection limit is shared.
